China's Economy in 2018

Quarterly GDP Growth

A

China's economy grew at a rate of 6.8 percent in 2018, unchanged from its April prediction by the International Monetary Fund (IMF). The economy's performance is expected to remain at around 6.5 percent for the next two years, according to data released for the second quarter, edging down 0.1 of a percentage point from the annual GDP growth target.

The country's economic growth is set to continue amid the wider push to open up the economy. China also has rich experience in dealing with trade uncertainties, and its domestic demand has become a decisive force for growth, its contribution to GDP growth as high as 78.5 percent in the first half of 2018, ahead of fixed assets investment.

China's trade spat with the United States has added that taxation policies should be adjusted. The rate was 6.7 percent the first six months, up 1.4 percentage points from the beginning of the year.

The job market was generally stable, with online retail sales surging by more than 30 percent.
