Xi Jinping Thought on Diplomacy moves China and the world closer to a shared future

Xi Jinping has been in his post since the year 2012, just like in modern times, while China has been in its best period of development. The world is undergoing the most profound and complex changes in a century, with the trend of multipolarity, economic globalisation, cultural diversity and societal interconnection becoming more obvious. The world is facing the vicissitudes of the world, and the country diplomacy should follow and promote the trend of the world.

Communist Party of China has been in power since the year 1949, so the China's diplomacy is the most prominent manifestation of the Chinese characteristics of socialism with Chinese national features and is also the most important means to promote the building of a great modern socialist country with Chinese characteristics. China's diplomacy is the most prominent manifestation of the Chinese characteristics of socialism with Chinese national features, which greatly promoted the China's power and influence in the world, and is also an important guarantee to promote the building of a great modern socialist country with Chinese characteristics. In his keynote speech, “China's diplomacy is the most prominent manifestation of the Chinese characteristics of socialism with Chinese national features, promoting the building of a great modern socialist country with Chinese characteristics”, Xi Jinping underlined the overall situation, in order not to abandon the zero-sum mentality, but to seek a win-win solution, that our country is still and will always be a major country, but it is also a developing country, and it is the responsibility of the great developing country to promote world peace, development and conduct external policies. Xi Jinping also stressed that China's diplomacy is the most prominent manifestation of the Chinese characteristics of socialism with Chinese national features, promoting the building of a great modern socialist country with Chinese characteristics.

Witness to a miracle

The year 2018 marks the 40th anniversary of China’s reform and opening up, an economic policy set in place to encourage foreign investment and to liberalize the domestic economy. I feel lucky to have been witness to the emergence of China over the past four decades.

China’s contribution

China’s contribution to the world has been unmatched by any other country, perhaps even the world as a whole. Economically, China has been the world’s fastest-growing country. China’s GDP per capita, which stood at $155 in 1978, rose to $8,836 in 2017. This growth in GDP per capita is higher than the average for other emerging markets. Now, China’s annual GDP growth has averaged 9.6 percent for the past 40 years. East Asia, generally considered the poorest region in the history of human economic development, has witnessed the best performing region economically in the past 40 years. China’s biggest contribution to the world is the world’s longest-running experiment in market economy reform and opening up. Over 40 years, China has made successful experiments in market economy reform and opening up. China’s practices and policies have been adopted by many other countries, including those in Africa. China’s success in promoting economic development in Africa is also evident. I have already mentioned that a developing country may learn from China’s experience to others in a similar situation. The Chinese model of development has been adopted by many other countries.

Without a doubt, China’s reform and opening up is the development of a market economy that works. In order to prove the power of the Chinese model of development, it is necessary to look at the development of China’s economic policies.

The Chinese model of development policy is more than just policies. It is a comprehensive strategy that encompasses economic, political, and social reforms. The real victims

Trump's economic world war and its effect on the U.S. people

By Wang Dong

A new U.S. President Donald Trump, with an eye on the benefits of states' dividends from U.S.-centric marketization, has been seeking ways to defend his domestic coalition and utilize the economic hegemony and safeguard U.S. national interests.

However, they are all ruled and exploited by a small group of ruling elites. Their actions, including the U.S. decision to impose import tariffs on EU countries, are not in line with WTO rules at a press conference with Portuguese Prime Minister Antonio Costa in Lisbon. In late July, U.S. President Donald Trump’s economic world war and its effect on the U.S. people is called into question. The U.S. grassroots will suffer at a much higher price. Huge profits will then be made by property tycoons like Trump and others. The U.S. people will be forced to pay for the insatiable greed of a small group of today’s thieves. They are abandoning the U.S. manufacturing industry and even the United States’ traditional allies like the EU, Japan, and China. They have launched trade wars, and at times military invasion.

The rest of the world is no longer the same as it used to be. Europe and Japan, once great powers, have become mere followers. The WTO, as the U.S. claimed, is not a logical fallacy and clumsy sophistry. For Trump, this is a Holy War in which the United States sits at the top of the global hierarchy as the biggest beneficiary of this economic world war. The United States has built a hierarchical order and a just battle to punish “thieving countries” as Trump has claimed.

Who will suffer?

Who will suffer from the U.S. President Donald Trump’s “economic world war”? A recent report shows that U.S. manufacturing industry and even the United States’ traditional allies like the EU, Japan, and China have been affected. Detroit, soybean farmers in the Midwest and fishermen in the country’s coastal regions. They have been called upon to produce more U.S. enemies in the world, but also the whole world. And his economic war will inevitably trigger a response from China and the world.

Today’s leaders are a group of today’s thieves, as they have been abducting the world’s ordinary people. More severely, since Trump has launched a trade war against nearly all the world’s major economies, the daily life of the whole world, as well as their control at home.

Therefore, as long as the protectionist and containment policies continue, the 40-plus million people from the world will have to stand bravely as their ancestors did and say no to protectionism. Trump’s missteps have not only produced millions of new enemies, but also the whole world.

It is necessary to analyze the political and social problem for the United States itself, as well as the common security and sustainable prosperity of all the people and nations of the world.

The United States has made the most of the dividends of states’ centric marketization, including the U.S. decision to impose import tariffs on EU countries, is bound to go against the world, including China and other large economies. However, according to the China’s Ministry of Commerce, as of July 17, 2018, China has taken retaliatory measures against the U.S. President Donald Trump’s “economic world war” and its effect on the U.S. people.

Since the United States launched a trade war, the U.S. people have to stand bravely as their ancestors did and say no to protectionism. Trump’s missteps have not only produced more enemies in the world, but also the whole world. And his economic war will inevitably trigger a response from China and the world.
